I. Introduction

Language plays an important role for humans in the process of communication, one party as a speaker and the other party as a speaker. However, humans rarely pay attention to the language used in everyday life which is the main means of communication. Communication using polite speech is an ethic that must be maintained. The Indonesian nation is a vast country and has a very high level of politeness. All tribes and cultures in Indonesia uphold politeness. Politeness can be in the form of speech or behavior or attitude of a person. The language used to obtain information or share information with others. Of course, to obtain human information using the media, both print media such as letters, newspapers, magazines and electronic media such as television and radio or mass media such as Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and YouTube. Social media is something that is connected on the Internet, which is widely used by people from children, teenagers to adults, one of which is YouTube. Youtube is one of the social media used to get information and entertainment. Comments on Instagram can be in the form of utterances that comply with the politeness principles and some that deviate from the polite language principles. Apart from that, there are various possibilities behind the utterances that comply with and deviate from the politeness principle in YouTube commentary language. On the YouTube page, you can find lots of utterances contained in comments, especially among state officials, artists, or other well-known groups, not least of which these posts trigger fights between the pros and cons. From there came the idea to analyze politeness in comments on the YouTube channel.

Preliminary studies from previous research, namely (1) A research journal entitled "Politeness in Language in Instagram Caption Comments". The research journal was compiled by Henny Isnaini Hartini, Hasnah Faiza AR and Charlina. The difference in this research is that it lies in the object of research and previous researchers researched language politeness in Instagram caption comments, while the author researched language politeness on the YouTube channel. The similarities are both researching language politeness. (2) Indonesian language educational journal entitled "Politeness in Language and Its Violations in Deddy Corbuzier's Youtube Channel Siti Fadilah Edition: A Conspiracy" compiled by Itznaniyah Umie Murniati, a student at the Islamic University of Semarang. The difference in this research is that it lies in the object of research and the researcher examines language politeness and its violations, while the author only researches language politeness. The similarity is that they both research language politeness. (3) Research journal entitled "Language Politeness in Online Media During the Covid-19 Period Indonesian Language is Upheld" compiled by Yusni Khairul Amri, Dian Marisha Putri. The difference in this study lies in the research object, namely the researcher uses online media data: cnbcindonesia.com, kompas.tv, kompas.com, detik.com, Republika.co.id, social media. While the author only uses commentary data on the Youtube channel. The similarity of this research is that they both examine language politeness and use Geoffrey Leech's politeness principles. Based on the reviews above, the authors draw conclusions from the title of this study, namely Politeness in the Comments Column on the Youtube Channel "Lesti Billar Domestic Violence Case Drama" Based on the Principles of Politeness in Language Geoffrey Leech.

II. Review of Literature

Pragmatics is the study of meaning associated with various word situations. According to Purwo (1990: 23-26) pragmatics is a linguistic subdiscipline that studies the application and mastery of language in communication. This is reinforced by the opinion of Leech (1993: 8) who argues that pragmatics is the study of meaning in relation to speech situations. According to Leech (1993:19-21), the aspects of the self-spoken situation include several aspects, namely: (1) the speaker (who greets or greets) and the addressee (who is greeted or greets), (2) the context of speech, as a knowledge background which is shared by speakers and interlocutors, (3) purpose of speech, (4) speech as an activity or activity, and (5) speech as a product of verbal acts. The use of language is essentially a process of conveying messages or ideas to listeners that contain meaning.

According to Purwo (1994:87) there are several experts who distinguish politeness in language. These experts are Lakoff, Fraser, Brown and Levinson and Leech. Their theory basically departs from the same observation, namely Grice's theory that in actual communication, speakers do not always adhere to the same working principle, which consists of maxims of quality, quantity, relation in that way. The difference, among other things, lies in how the experts see the form of a unified rule. (Charlina and Mangatur, 2007; 33). However, in this study, the authors only focused on the politeness principles according to Leech.

According to Leech Leech (1993: 126-127) politeness is something that cannot be underestimated, because according to Leech politeness is related to the relationship between communication participants, namely speakers and listeners. So the speaker uses the sentence in his speech politely without offending the listener. In speaking, he should pay attention to the principle of politeness so that the utterances spoken can be well received and considered polite. Leech (1993: 206-219) suggests a study of politeness principles in pragmatics which consists of six maxims, namely the maxim of discretion, the maxim of generosity, the maxim of appreciation, the maxim of modesty, the maxim of agreement, and the maxim of sympathy. The following is an explanation of the six maxims: among others a) The maxim of wisdom (Tact Maxim) The basic principle of the maxim of wisdom obliges the speech participant to reduce other people's losses and maximize other people's benefits; b) Generosity Maxim This generosity maxim expects participants to reduce their own gains and maximize their own losses or self-sacrifice. If the wisdom maxim is centered on others, the generosity maxim is self-centered; c) Approbation Maxim According to the maxim of appreciation, a person can be considered polite if he respects others. With the maxim of respect, it is hoped that the speech participants will not belittle or insult each other; d) Modesty Maxim According to the Modesty Maxim or the modesty maxim, participants can be humble by reducing self-praise so that participants are not said to be arrogant. The speaker is expected to be humble e) The agreement maxim (agreement maxim) The agreement maxim or the maxim of conformity emphasizes the compatibility between the speaker and the interlocutor. It is hoped that the participants and speech partners will be polite if there is an agreement; f) Sympathy Maxim According to the sympathy maxim, participants must maximize sympathy and minimize antipathy towards the other person.

The maxims above stated by Leech can be used to measure the politeness scale. The politeness scale is a politeness rating starting from the most polite to the most impolite. With the principles of politeness, speakers are expected to be able to use language politely. Politeness must be upheld so that among speakers there are no misunderstandings that can lead to disputes. When speaking politely, it cannot be separated from the age of a speaker when dealing with his interlocutor. A good speaker must be able to adjust the interlocutor whether he is younger, the same age or older.

III. Results and Discussion

1. The Maxim of Wisdom (Tact Maxim)

The maxim of wisdom (Tact Maxim) The basic principle of the maxim of wisdom obliges the speech participant to reduce other people's losses and maximize other people's benefits. If the speaker maximizes other people's benefits, the other person must maximize himself. The utterances on the maxim of wisdom are centered on others. One can avoid jealousy if one adheres to the maxim of wisdom. Beneficial treatment of other parties is done so that they are considered polite and protect the feelings of the other person.

In the text above, the account user gives up to 9 words of appreciation and even prays for the suspect in the domestic violence case, instead of insulting Bilar. The results of the analysis show the maxim of wisdom, but because it is done excessively it can be considered a violation of the maxim of wisdom. Why is it called a violation of the maxim of wisdom? Which netizens instead chose to comment positively and pray for Rizky Billar to change.

In the comments above, the account user gives the maxim of appreciation for the attitude of the victim in this case, namely in the sentence ‘beruntung bilyar dapat Lesti’. But in the sentence after that, namely “..Lesti biar siksa sampai masuk rumah sakit tetap di maafin” this sentence is the opposite of the sentence at first he wrote, actually the account user did not like the attitude of the victim who forgave the domestic violence case that befell the victim, but the account user tried to give negative comments which he arranged neatly and covered them by giving a sentence of appreciation at the beginning of the sentence, even though he actually wanted to give a negative comment but using the maxim of appreciation to cover it up because as we ourselves know that accepting torture to the point of being admitted to the hospital is not a proper attitude to be rewarded.
